

THIS MONTH WE ASKED OUR CONTRIBUTORS:
WHAT IS THE ITEM IN YOUR CLOSET YOU TREASURE MOST?

👉 DJUNA BEL

Djuna Bel spent her hippie youth between the Netherlands and the redwood trees of Northern California before moving to New York in her late teens, where she modeled, produced indie films, played in a few failed punk bands and eventually opened a Lower East Side boutique.

The now-bicoastal stylist loves game nights, playing truth or dare, watching other people do karaoke and going on spontaneous road trips, even though she's only been driving on the freeways for a year. Bel styled cover star Brie Larson in "C'est la Brie," on page 56.

"A tiny leather jacket from the '70s that was a gift from my mom's friend in Amsterdam. When she was in her 20s, she wore it at a photo shoot her husband was doing with Jimi Hendrix, who insisted on keeping the jacket. She declined to give it to [Hendrix], and that jacket is now mine."

👈 JUSTIN COIT

Justin Coit grew up in Palm Springs, California, and enjoys playing golf and visiting Las Vegas for 24 hours at a time. Now living in LA with his wife, Katherine, and their Russian Blue cat, Nelson, Coit fancies himself an Asian food aficionado and avid vegetable-garden farmer. The photographer—who prefers Red Vines over Twizzlers—captured Brie Larson for the cover story "C'est la Brie," on page 56.

"My most treasured piece of clothing is my Simone varsity jacket. My friend Katie Nehra is the designer, and she just started doing men's varsity jackets—they're amazing!"

👉 EMMA GRADY

Emma Grady, a New York-based writer, grew up on the coast of Maine splashing in tide pools, playing dress up and dreaming of living in the big city. (Now she dreams of living on the Amalfi coast.) When she's not running to a fashion event or working on her website (pastfashionfuture.com), she spends spare moments exercising one of her magical powers: finding quality vintage pieces at unbelievably low prices. For this issue, Grady wrote about jewelry designer Pamela Love (page 25) and the NYC offices of beauty mecca NARS (page 32).

"I adore so many of my vintage and heirloom pieces, but my most treasured is a gold charm bracelet that was passed on to me. It has priceless sentimental value."

👈 GEMMA HART INGALLS

Photographer Gemma Hart Ingalls lives and works in Brooklyn but escapes as often as possible to far-off destinations as well as the woods of Marlboro, Vermont, where she and her husband just finished renovating their house. When she's not taking pictures, Ingalls can be found frog hunting with her 19-month-old, Ollie; trying to finish reading the Steve Jobs biography; pickling green beans or eating with friends somewhere outside. Ingalls shot emerging NYC-based fashion designers for "Fantastic Four," on page 72.

"A sheer turquoise beach frock I picked up in Paxos, Greece. It's easy, light, doesn't wrinkle and has a kind of sexy muumuu vibe."
